Getting back to work

The workplace has undergone great change in the past couple of months, with fewer staff, one-way systems and more anti-bacterial hand gel than ever. As lockdown eases and more businesses re-open, the safety of staff and customers remains a top priority for businesses. Newly imposed social distancing measures and an increase in the remote workforce is completely re-shaping the look and feel of the workplace.

The Irish government is offering financial support to help businesses mitigate the impact of COVID-19 and return to work safely. The COVID-19 Credit Guarantee Scheme facilitates up to €2 billion* in lending to eligible businesses.

Small and medium sized business will also have access to the COVID-19 Business Loans. These loans are up to €25,000* and are available through Microfinance Ireland with zero repayments and zero interest for the first 6 months.

These grants and loans from the government will help SME's access new technology and equipment as well as other services to help them get back on track.

We have put together a series of meeting space products designed to bring staff back to work remotely, whilst enabling communication with those who return to the office. Social distancing and safety are paramount, so we have also included some signage packages specifically geared towards COVID-secure environments.

In the past, meeting rooms were generally comprised of many people physically in the space with one or two joining remotely. With the current situation and new safety guidelines being enforced, that's likely to change with only a few people able to be in the meeting room and the majority joining remotely.

While most workers can host a virtual meeting from their home office, transferring these skills into a meeting room may not be as easy. Many meeting rooms still lack the technology and software for virtual collaboration.

SMART Teamwork software enables you to launch web-based conferencing with a single touch.
